SULC, EDUCATIONAL PARTNERS HOST NATIONAL CIVIL RIGHTS CONFERENCE

Southern University Law Center's Louis A. Berry Institute for Civil Rights and Justice, in partnership with the National Education and Empowerment Coalition, Inc., and Miami University, hosted the 11th Annual National Civil Rights conference in Baton Rouge, on June 20-2. Pre-conference activities took place at historic locations throughout New Orleans from June 18-19.

The conference theme was "Engage, Educate & Empower." The historic conference opened on June 18 in New Orleans with free Restorative Justice Circle trainings for youth in the community, a historic marker unveiling, tours, and more. Attendees also attended a special Father's Day event honoring the lives of local civil rights veterans and a private screening of "A Crime on The Bayou," which told the story of Gary Duncan, a Black teenager arrested and convicted for touching a white boy's arm in Louisiana in 1966.

Baton Rouge conference activities took place at Southern University and the Baton Rouge Hilton Capitol Center.

Those who attended the conference were able to take tours and hear presentations on the murders of Denver Smith and Leonard Brown from Donney Rose, award-winning writer and chief content editor of The North Star, and on The Baton Rouge Bus Boycott, featuring Eugene Collins, president of the Baton Rouge Branch of the NAACP.

Youth attendees participated in sessions covering a range of topics, such as human rights, therapeutic art, and more.

In addition, Southern University alumnus and award-winning filmmaker Keith Beauchamp hosted a screening of his documentary, "The Untold Story of Emmett Till" and the Civil Rights

SUSTAINABILITY AND EQUITY WERE ON THE AGENDA AT THE INTERNATIONAL GLOBAL CORPORATE GOVERNANCE CONFERENCE

The Law Center hosted the 8th Annual Global Corporate Governance Institute (GCGI) Conference on June 8-10. This year's theme was "Global Corporate Governance: Sustainability and Equity".

GCGI is a non-profit entity and has held annual conferences on corporate governance and corporate social responsibility since 2014 in places such as the United Kingdom, China, Australia, Germany, the United Arab Emirates, Spain, and Portugal. This year's conference was the first held in the Western Hemisphere. The conferences attract global scholars, lawyers, and businesspeople who present their research on how corporations are addressing or should be addressing the most serious issues facing society. The best papers are then published by a major international publisher.

During the conference, in addition to presenting their research, participants engaged in discussions, heard presentations from noteworthy keynote speakers, and networked with conference attendees. Speakers included local, national, and international trailblazers in business, law, and society on topics relating to entrepreneurial approaches to sustainability and equity.
